Fit for Fetes

WHAT FIRST ATTRACTED this Arizona couple to their new home was its compact kitchen, but the small space ended up being the bane of their existence. Not only was it nearly impossible to organize, but the ill-conceived room had but one drawer—a problem they realized when attempting to unpack. Besides the lack-of-space issues, the floor plan was illogical, cutting through the adjacent living room and creating muddled pathways. By happenstance, their neighbor Pamela Powers is an interior designer who jumped at the chance to help her friends, who hired Cook Remodeling & Custom Construction to transform the design to reality.

Cook Remodeling's design proposal moved the existing kitchen 20 feet to the opposite end of the room to capture the breakfast nook and pantry space, slotted in a roomy dining area, and reconfigured the laundry to add a half-bath and pantry. Ample windows welcome in natural light, while an extended walk-through from the garage includes a sizeable bank of cabinets. The family favorite is the island with a waterfall edge. Lit indirectly from above and below, the double-sided piece is party central, with frameless cabinets on each side providing storage galore.

Their refashioned kitchen perfectly suited for parties, these happy hosts are tickled pink with the results. Learn more about this design-build firm at www.cookremodeling.com. «
